

"I WAS FOULED," IS SCOTT'S CRY AFTER DEFEAT

Alibi Wail of Fighting Englishman Heard Afar

THOUSANDS DISAGREE

"British Grit." He Says, Helped Him to Go Back to Ring

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Sports Writer

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 28.—"I was fouled, I can't understand how they get away with such stuff in American rings."

"I think I showed I wasn't yellow. If it wasn't for my British grit I'd never have gone back in there after having been struck low half a dozen times."

This today is the alibi wail of fainting Phil Scott of Great Britain, who collapsed and lost by a technical knockout in the third round to Jack Sharkey of the U. S. A., in their sensational and pulse-stirring battle in Madison Square Stadium here last night, as he expressed it to International News Service.

Thousands of Americans, including the writer, will disagree with Mr. Scott—not only on the ground that he was fouled but also on the assertion that he showed "British grit." He actually is as good an actor as John Mansfield and as accomplished a "faller" as any acrobat who ever trod the boards.

Mr. Scott was lying on his dressing table, a towel wrapped around his torso when this correspondent interviewed him. He was smoking a cigarette and during the course of the conversation he took a swig from a small bottle labeled "Vat 69." He seemed much better after the drink, although not for a second did the pained expression leave his face.

Outside, at the ringside, Jimmy Johnston, Scott's American manager, was shouting "robbery"—a "plot." Correspondents from all over the country, and from abroad, were asking each other, "was he fouled, or wasn't he?" the place was in an uproar.

It had been a dramatic fight, almost as sensational as the famous battle seven years ago between Jack Dempsey and Luis Firpo. It may not have been what faded experts call a "good fight" but it was a thriller.

Scott, wearing the British Union-Jack on his blue trunks, had started bravely enough in the first round, he even held his own in the initial stanza, giving as much as he took, and evoking a few "Ah-h-h's" from the spectators.

And then came the fireworks. The second round was well underway when Sharkey rushed Scott into Sharkey's own corner and wrestled him to the floor. Some experts claim the Boston boy hit Scott on the button but the writer, with his chin on the ring two feet away, didn't see a decent punch landed. When Scott went down in a little pile of rosin the excited Sharkey bounded over him and jumped like a madman to a neutral corner.

A bleary look in his sad eyes, Scott slowly arose at the count of six and clinched with the unshrinking Sharkey, managing, somehow, to stick out the round.

The third round was a thriller. They hadn't exchanged a dozen blows when Mr. Scott went down again, an agonized expression on his face. He had been clipped on the side of the head with a left hook. He took a count of three and came up, rather dazed, an apprehensive look on his countenance.

Sharkey circled him rapidly, closed in, socked him a left to the pit of the

NEW JERSEY THREATENS TO BAR PENNA. TRUCKS

Controversy Result of Recent Drive Against Unlicensed Trucks Here

PENNA. TO HALT DRIVE

TRENTON, Feb. 28.—Threat by Motor Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill that he would bar every Pennsylvania motor truck from New Jersey roads unless they secured Jersey licenses has resulted in the stopping of an alleged campaign of harassment of New Jersey truckmen in Pennsylvania.

It was reported to Mr. Dill that the Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol was interfering with the operation of Jersey trucks, contending that the reciprocity agreement in force between the two States would no longer be recognized by Pennsylvania after January 1, so far as commercial vehicles were concerned.

The complaints, said Mr. Dill, mounted to such numbers that he finally notified Pennsylvania authorities that unless the matter were cleared up immediately, he would station inspectors at all points of entry from Pennsylvania to New Jersey and refuse admittance to every Pennsylvania truck unless the owners first bought New Jersey registrations.

In a letter from the Pennsylvania Motor Vehicle Department received by Mr. Dill, a disclaimer is made that any wholesale campaign is being made against New Jersey commercial vehicles. It is desired, the letter said, to bring to book only those who are violating the 15-day reciprocity agreement.

The letter, from Deputy Commissioner Person, stated:

"I would appreciate," wrote Mr. Person, "your advising me immediately when you have knowledge that our patrolmen are apprehending and filing information against a New Jersey resident when such resident has not been operating within this commonwealth for a period exceeding 15 days. You can rest assured that such cases will be immediately investigated and, if necessary, charges dismissed as the department is only desirous to enforce the law as enacted in order that we may enjoy the reciprocity privileges" (Continued on Page Four)

ARROWS vs. GYPSIES

Playing two five-minute extra periods the Arrows last evening defeated the Shamrocks by the score of 20 to 18. Failure to make their free shots good was the cause of the "Pats" defeat, as they scored only two out of nine tries, while the Arrows counted four out of eight. As each of the teams scored eight field goals it was this that decided the fracas.

The score at the 40-minute whistle stood 17 all. During the first extra period McCafferty of the Shamrocks scored a free throw, making it 18-17. "Jeannie" Brady of the Arrows also made good a free toss, again tying the score, 18-18.

Shortly after the second extra period began, Fallon of the Arrows scored a twin-pointer, giving his team a 20-18 lead, which they held until the final whistle.

Ferry and Fallon divided the scoring honors, totalling four field goals each. The second game of the evening was another forfeit game, which was won by the Fighters because of the Gypsies' failure to place a team on the floor at the starting whistle. As the Arrows defeated the Shamrocks in the opening game this throws the league into a three-cornered tie with the Fighters, Shamrocks and Arrows all having won four and lost two.

TOT SERIOUSLY BURNED PLAYING WITH BONFIRE

Injuries to Alice Barbetta, 5, May Prove to Be Fatal

NOW IN THE HOSPITAL

An Italian child, 5, was seriously and perhaps fatally burned shortly before noon today when the tot along with two other children of about her age rekindled a bon-fire on Logan street.

The burned: Alice Barbetta, 434 Jefferson avenue. Seriously burned about her entire body from her face down to her feet. She is in the Harriman Hospital.

A fire had been kindled on Logan street by a resident of the neighborhood who had burned some debris. When she was through the woman took particular pains to see that the fire was extinguished.

Sometime afterward little Alice Barbetta was seen running into the yard of her parents' home, screaming and virtually a living torch.

The first to see the child after she had caught fire was Mrs. Rose Pico who leaped a fence and grabbed the youngster. She was joined by Mrs. Carlo Juno who wrapped the child in a piece of carpet. The two were assisted by Mrs. Michael Rago, 436 Jefferson avenue.

The child was then rushed to the Harriman Hospital.

All three women who attempted to extinguish the flames were burned but not seriously. They were treated by a physician.

It is presumed that the little Barbetta child along with her playmates, Anthony Juno and Clara Pico, all of Jefferson avenue, rekindled the fire and gathered paper from the street and thus rebuilt the fire. The Barbetta child's dress caught fire and as she ran to her home the flames were fanned by the wind.

SEATS, GOOD AND BAD

Those sufferers who have purchased "good seats" at "top prices" for the concert, theater or sport event only to find themselves "stymied" by a pillar or stage-end or otherwise disadvantageously located seats will sympathize with the citizen who paid mid-field prices for seats back of the goal posts at a major football game, and will approve of his drastic action in taking the matter up with the state authorities with the result that the uncomfortable ticket agent lost his license. The prompt and effective action of the official suggests that at some time or other he has had a similar experience, than which there is none more unsettling to the mental equilibrium.

Architecture and engineering will not be "finished" arts until they devise ways and means for making all theater seats aisle and center seats, unobstructed by pillars and posts, and for building bowls and stadiums for every seat of which every line and corner of the grid-iron will be in full and intimate view.

Until then the tardy will have to put up with undesirable seats sold as such and at appropriately cut rates. But they do not have to tolerate deception and misrepresentation, and should consider it their duty to themselves and the public to report dishonest practices of this sort either on the part of institutions or individuals.

ARMS AND THE CRIMINAL

One by one the crime cure-alls, of which so much was expected and for which law-makers claimed so much, are losing the confidence of the police and the people as they prove themselves to be a poor match against the ingenuity and audacity of the underworld.

When the New York legislature passed the Barnes-habitual criminal act, the nation foresaw the time when that state would be relatively free of hardened criminals at large. It is now generally conceded that the net caught only the "small fry" and very few of them.

Another anti-crime shell that proved a dud was the Sullivan act of New York state. This statute, which made possession of a revolver without a police permit illegal, left the criminal class armed to the teeth while disarming the law-abiding citizenry and leaving it unprotected against the armed criminal.

Disappointed in the Sullivan act the New York legislature is considering an even more drastic bill to replace it. This proposed law would restrict the possession and use of the pistol to law-enforcement officers. But would it? Will the criminal on a mission of murder and plunder heed an edict against carrying weapons? And would cities and towns of unarmed households discourage crime, even by unarmed criminals?

Pistols are safe in the hands of nobody, not even in the hands of enforcement officers. They are the usual weapons in deliberate, impetuous and accidental killings, and present-day law enforcement methods have encouraged gun-toting federal agents and other enforcement officers to stage a good imitation of a reign of terror.

"GENERAL CRACK"

BY GEORGE PREEDY

Copyright 1928 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.
The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore, is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Count Hensdorff, special envoy of King Leopold, has traveled on horseback to reach the Chateau of General Crack, the soldier who has never lost a single battle, and whose support would mean victory to King Leopold in his battle to sustain his title of Emperor. The aristocratic Hensdorff despises General Crack as a base-born commoner, and dislikes his mission. He has come to offer Crack the hand of the Emperor's sister, if he will support him. He is charged to learn that General Crack has his eye on another lady, Princess Eleonora, daughter of Archduke Dessoir, whom Leopold intends to marry.

CHAPTER II—Continued
Glibly he wished success to the Count's mission, and unavailingly drank the health of the young Archduchess. Colonel Pons, who appeared to dislike him rather brusquely, changed the subject, speaking of a hunting party arranged for the next Tuesday which he hoped Count Hensdorff would honor with his presence.
"Nay," replied that gentleman, "I must take my answer and be gone."
"With a picture of General Crack for the Archduchess," smiled Gabor.

Maria Luisa, the woman in the case.

silly, at which his colleagues laughed derisively, but Hensdorff kept his gloomy countenance.
"It is all very well for you to laugh," he sneered, "but things change very rapidly these times. You are all snar now, but the time may come when you will be glad of a word from me to the Emperor."
"Well, we shan't get it, I know," answered Colonel Pons. "And I, for one, shan't ask for it. I mean to die in my last battle."
"How," asked Hensdorff, "will you know it is your last battle? In every encounter you will save yourself for the next till you are too decrepit to stir abroad."

A lackey entered and respectfully told Colonel Pons that General Crack wished to see him immediately.
The Colonel hastily left his unfinished supper and hurried away without apology. Hensdorff sat sullen between Hanning and Gabor and occupied himself with his food.

III
The apartments of General Crack were in the left of the Chateau beyond the theatre, on the ground floor; they were approached by a guardroom with stairs of bayonets on the walls and a dozen of pistols on the ceiling, where four Uhlans sat in full-fed leisure.
Beyond was an antechamber from which opened a laboratory.

Here sat Herr Hippmann, the astrologer and alchemist, who looked like an unfrocked priest.
Colonel Pons passed him, with a quick greeting, and hurried, with his strutting way and important air, into the next room.

"His Highness," said the doctor with decorum, "prefers to lie in the dark, but he is awake and you may speak to him through the curtains."

"I was sent for," replied Colonel Pons, crouching the bed with respect. "I hope my presence is still required."
"It is," conceded the doctor. "Pray be seated; when His Highness desires to do so, he will speak to you."

Colonel Pons rather gingerly took one of the frail looking chairs, folded his hands on his rounded knees, turned his bulging blue eyes towards the bed, and waited.

This bed was in the center of the room and closely curtained on all four sides with rose cloth of gold.

"Well, I don't know. I expect, sir, you'll be a little surprised."
"Shall I, Pons?"
"He offers his sister, the Archduchess."
"The same one?"
"Maria Luisa. With the title of Archduchess as dowry."
"Nothing else?"
"Your Highness knows they've got nothing else."
Silence from behind the bed curtains.

"Of course, if they succeeded, the thing would be very handsome, no doubt. On the steps of the throne."
The voice interrupted:
"When I'd smash the Allies they'd find an excuse for backing out."

"Naturally the marriage would take place before the campaign opened," said Pons. "Hensdorff is as full of tricks as ever; he told Hanning one round lie at least. He said the Emperor had settled with Archduke Dessoir."

"For his daughter?"
"Yes."
"Perhaps he has, behind my back. Archduke Dessoir is capable of tout."
"And so, sir, is Hensdorff. I told him you were sure of the lady."

"And that," said the voice with sudden weariness, "was another lie, Pons."

"Not so deep a one as his, I dare say, Monsieur. Well, that's his offer, neither more nor less. And I was to give Your Highness the picture of the Archduchess, as they name her, and a letter from her brother."

"I believe I saw her once, Pons, but not thinking of her in this way, did not notice her. Give me her picture."

"It does more credit to the painter than the sister, but if you took her it would hardly be for her beauty, so it is less matter."

A hand, half hidden in a lace ruffle tied with a black ribbon, came out between the folds of brocade and took box and letter; it was then withdrawn, and Pons heard the curtains being pulled apart on the far side of the bed.

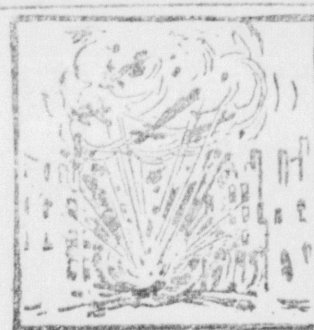

"They have made the best of a plain woman," remarked General Crack. "A bitter contrast to the others, eh, Pons? It's no—and no—"

"I am to say 'no' to Hensdorff, then, sir?" he asked doubtfully.

NON-SHATTERABLE PLATE GLASS

PRICELESS PROTECTION AT NO EXTRA COST

COMPARE the new Nash Twin-Ignition Eight to other cars sold at its price and you'll instantly see its extra value and desirability. One very important feature of this new 1930 Nash "400" is Duplate non-shatterable plate glass in every window, door and windshield—priceless protection at no extra cost. And this is only one of many superior features which account for the superior performance of the Twin-Ignition Eight. The performance of the straight-eight, Twin-Ignition motor with its 9-bearing, integrally counterweighted, hollow crankpin crankshaft and aluminum connecting rods is so superior to that of the other straight eights and the V-eights you will know it instantly. The oil-cushioned chassis (Bijur centralized chassis lubrication and permanently lubricated springs) improves riding ease immeasurably. See this car, ride in it, familiarize yourself with its superior performance, before you purchase your new car!

"I Was Fouled," Is Scott's Cry After His Defeat

stomach and a right to the head. Again Phil fell, the spectators were in an uproar and from Scott's corner came a chorus of cries to "take a count." Scott looked up at Referee Lou Magnolia, who was bending over him, and groaned. "I was fouled," Magnolia apparently non-plussed and no doubt intuitively realizing Phil's reputation of figuring in foul fights, hesitated before starting to count. Magnolia decided to count. He got up to six, but there lay Scott, moaning and squirming, and holding his mid-section. Magnolia reached down, lifted him up and dragged him to his stool.

"Can you go on?" asked Magnolia. "I'll try," replied Scott. His head slumping from side to side, and apparently all the fight out of him. Magnolia conducted a hurried examination and decided to give him a minute's rest. This action was a precedent in major boxing contests. Dr. P. W. Davis, representing the Miami Boxing Board, had been summoned to the corner. There was a great hubbub, what with Jimmy Johnston running around in circles and shouting to the high heavens and Sharkey completely "up in the air."

Sharkey in fact, broke down and wept. He buried his head in his gloves as he leaned on the red ropes of the ring and cried with pent-up emotion. He had been waded to his corner by Magnolia. He may have thought he had been disqualified.

"The big bum went down without being hit," Sharkey roared.

They sent Scott back in after the minute rest. Two minutes and thirty-four seconds of the third round had elapsed. He came out, a frightened look on his pale face, and Sharkey, rush at him like an enraged bull.

RUMOR KING ALFONSO MAY ABDICATE IN YEAR

By Tomas Loayza

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

MADRID, Feb. 28.—King Alfonso of Spain may abdicate before another year has passed in order to prevent a weakening of the Royalist forces in this country, it was rumored today.

The report that the King may be induced to sacrifice his throne spread following the riotous demonstration which occurred when Jose Sanchez Guerra, ex-Premier and "grand old man" of Spanish politics, made his first public address since his return from the exile into which Primo de Rivera, his arch enemy, forced him.

While the bulk of the demonstrators who filled the streets of Madrid with shouts of "Down with the King" were Republicans, nevertheless there are many prominent Royalists who support Guerra's attitude. This attitude is continuation of the monarchy but opposition to the rule of the present King.

It is felt, however, that a crisis is unlikely before the end of the year, when the Royalist-Republican issue is expected to be fought at the polls.

KONJOLA WINS OVER ANOTHER STUBBORN CASE

New Medicine Quickly Conquers Stomach Ailment of Long Standing

MR. CHARLES H. MUCKLE

"I suffered for a long time with a severe stomach ailment," said Mr. Charles H. Muckle, 512 Conrad avenue, North Charleston. "Gases formed in my stomach after meals and bloated terribly. The pains in my throat and chest were often frightful and heart-burn made me miserable. I could not eat even the simplest foods without suffering for hours afterward. I was losing weight and strength."

"The first bottle of Konjola showed me that I had found the right medicine. I continued the use of this great compound until I had taken eight bottles and I never had a sign of stomach trouble. I have not bloated or belched after meals and the pains in my chest are gone. I eat heartily of my favorite foods and am rapidly gaining back my lost weight and strength. I can never praise this great medicine enough."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cat Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv.)

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM TO PLAY BENSLEM FIVE

At the high school gymnasium to-night the local cage five will meet one of the members of the Lower Bucks County Basketball League. This is a return game prior to the one played at Bensalem.

Bensalem has developed a good team this year, the team making a good showing in all games it has played. As both teams are reported in the best of condition there is no doubt that the audience will be pleased with the contest.

The Bristol quintet defeated the Newtown Five last Friday night in an interesting game also played at home. Their standing is not yet as certain as tonight's game has much to do with it.

The schools entered in the basketball league include Bristol, Bensalem, Morrisville and Langhorne. Thus Morrisville has the lead by defeating Langhorne last week. This league has stirred up much competition and as a result keen rivalry is established.

At 3.45 p. m. the girls' sextet will contend against Bordentown. The Jersey girls have also developed the team to a high standing with the other schools and have become one of the leading rivals of the Bristol Girls' basketball team.

Last week the local sextet captured first place in the Girls' Lower Bucks County League in this way putting Bristol on a like standing with some of the Lower Philadelphia Suburban schools.

Previous to that game Bensalem and Bristol were tied for first place and as a result much competition took place between the schools. The girls did not encounter much difficulty in gaining the victory although they were threatened several times during the game.

The boys will meet Bensalem at 8.00 p. m. This is also a League game.
